

Printout

Thursday, September 26, 2019 12:26 PM

Self-Assessment: S.W.O.T. Analysis

A self-analysis exercise of your personal strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats.

STRENGTHS: The traits or skills that set you apart from others.

1. When facing a problem, I don't judge it. I take time to understand it, then fix it.
2. I have had a long career of customer interactions, and know how to listen to others views.
3. When welcomed, I like to be a foundation of support for others.
4. I have background knowledge in Consumer IT, and understand Windows and Apple OS (All Apple).
5. I tend to be flexible and give my share of the work, and help others when I can.

WEAKNESSES: The traits or areas in which you need to improve as a professional.

1. I sometimes have a hard time speaking up about issues.
2. I tend to be distant from others and only have a few who are close.
3. I cannot fully describe my ideas in an effective way.
4. I become consumed by the task at hand and can loose track to time.
5. Fear to go with change. Need to be more like water.

OPPORTUNITIES: The external factors to take advantage of, while in pursuit of a new job opportunity and/or promotion.

1. Large community of people which may share ideas or have conflicting ideas to mine.
2. Learning is the stepping stone to greater learning. Each step I take I understand something new.
3. I might be able to work in a different department of old tech employers.
4. More people will soon see how valuable programming is, and the newer coders will need someone experience to guide them.
5. Advancements in tech of given us the ability to learn information more freely. Just need to look.

THREATS: The external factors which could potentially be a barrier to attaining your goals.

1. Technology is an ever growing field. All I learn today can be useless tomorrow. Cannot stop growing.
2. Financial restrictions. It getting harder and harder to keep up with the bills.
3. Allowing myself become consumed in things that does not improve my progress.
4. Fear that I could be wrong and not speak up. I cannot learn if I do not ask.
5. Not embracing change.